

International Journal of Education and Ageing

- New peer-reviewed print journal's second volume, 2011-12
- Subscription offer and call for papers

The International Journal of Education and Ageing is published by the Association for Education and Ageing (AEA)* in response to the rapidly changing worlds of ageing, older people and lifelong learning. There are three parts per year - about 240 pages total per annual volume. An additional on-line version is available to subscribers.

Purpose and scope

The IJEA seeks to bring together, in a critical and accessible manner, the best of international research, scholarship and practice in learning in later life. It aims to:

- Draw on a broad range of social science and other disciplines
- Explore worldwide the interface with the main areas of social, economic, health and ageing policy and practice
- Feature critical evaluation of development and practice
- Promote an international community of researchers and practitioners
- Foster new approaches to research, practice and dissemination
- Publish reviews of recent publications, resources and events

The Journal will be of key interest to all those engaged in the study of learning in later life, broadly defined, and/or in fields of practice which contribute to it.

In particular, it will be essential reading for those engaged in:

- Research and scholarship
- Training or developing those who work with older people
- Lifelong learning as tutors, managers or learners
- Health promotion, financial education, life planning and advice & guidance for older people
- Social and health care and advocacy for older people
- Policy making and implementation
- International and national older people's networks, movements and partnerships
