

John Miles is a community development worker in London and worked on the Camden Quality of Life Strategy for Older Citizens at the beginning of the last decade. He holds a Masters in Gerontology at Kings College, London in 1990 and completed his PhD at Keele in 2014 following research into intergenerational practice. During 1990 John taught on the diploma in ageing studies at Birkbeck College. He helped found the Older Peoples Advocacy Alliance in 1998 and is currently a director of Conversation into Action and the research associate for Kilburn Older Voices Exchange.

